Orange Silver: It's on a Triple Price Sale and Uncle Sam Holds 85,000 Tons of It

WASHINGTON.—Silver is an odd metal, and some of the facts connected with it are pretty odd too. For one thing, Uncle Sam now has on hand in various vaults, strongboxes and what not, rather more than 85,000 tons of the metal.

Germany Defiant as Europe Voices Fears of Danzig

"Calm, and Conscious of Our Strength," Says German Official

EVENTS IN DANZIG

Police Reinforced, But No German Troops Have Entered City

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—British Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax's warning that Great Britain would fight in the case of "further aggression," and repeated expression of fears in London and Paris that a Nazi coup was being prepared in Danzig, were met with shoulder-shrugs Friday in official German quarters.

"We are conscious of our strength, and supremely calm, in contrast to the nervousness prevailing in London and Paris," an official said.

Activity in Danzig FREE CITY OF DANZIG.—(AP)—The Nazi-controlled government of Danzig eyed apprehensively in much of Europe as a danger spot to peace—went ahead Friday with the strengthening of the Free City's police force.

Officials said this was necessary as a precautionary measure because of the "hysteria prevailing in Poland."

It was denied that any German troops had entered Danzig, and there was no sign of military activity in the city or adjoining countryside.

Call French Cabinet PARIS, France.—(AP)—Amid official expressions of grave times are ahead, Premier Daladier Friday called the cabinet for a meeting Saturday morning, in a session which informed sources said would deal principally with international affairs.

Dutch Cabinet Resigns AMSTERDAM, Holland.—(AP)—The Netherlands cabinet of Dr. Hendrikus Colijn resigned Friday as a result of a controversy with Catholic ministers over the question of borrowing funds to finance defense and unemployment projects.

Criticism asked by Queen Wilhelmina immediately to try to form another government. He withheld his decision temporarily.

Danzig Threatened PARIS.—(AP)—French diplomatic quarters heard reports Thursday night that 600,000 reservists had been called to duty in Germany and that France had assured Poland of automatic military assistance in event of aggression.

French agents were said to have reported to Paris that "men and officers of the German army" as well as Nazi party formations were secretly moving into Danzig, the Free City on the Baltic which Germans assert will "return home to the Reich" and which Polish spokesmen say is part of "the sun and air of our existence."

Some of the reservists called up, these reports said, were being used to fill the places of those sent to Danzig.

The same reports said there were many shipments of "contraband" arms across the border from East Prussia into Danzig. Foreign diplomatic experts were of the opinion that while the situation might be working toward a crisis it was not yet critical.

Officials in Berlin and Danzig have issued several denials of reports from Paris, London and Warsaw that trained Germans were gathering in Danzig to strengthen the forces there.

Polish Envoy These reports were said to have resulted in a long conference of Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet with Julius Lukasiewicz, the Polish ambassador, at which assurance was given that Britain and France would fulfill their mutual assistance pledges to Poland automatically if there were aggression.

Short Course in Clothing Offered Miss Ruth Taylor to Conduct Four-Day Course Starting Monday

Miss Ruth Taylor, instructor of home economics of the local high school, will begin a series of four lessons in single clothing construction at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at the home economics cottage.

All Hope women interested in enrolling for the short course are requested to meet Miss Taylor Monday afternoon in order that work may begin promptly. Those attending are urged to bring sewing equipment and material with which to work.

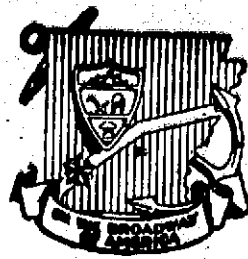

Some of the work projects include simple wash dresses, kitchen curtains and other articles. These will be no lesson on Tuesday (Fourth of July), but classes will be resumed Wednesday and will continue through Thursday and Friday.

Miss Taylor said she would be glad to assist in salvaging problems of clothing construction.

Roosevelt Signs Measure Designed to Relieve Business

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The fiscal year which ends at midnight Friday amid a flurry of overtime work by Treasury bookkeepers produced federal expenditures of approximately $9,250,000,000, or $3,850,000,000 more than the government's income.

The deficit was nearly 1/2 billion dollars less than expected, because of much smaller expenditures, and higher receipts than estimated six months ago.

Retention of Top Soil Is Discussed by Farm Speaker

Charles A. Sheffield Is Principal Speaker Before 1,600

YEARLY VISITING DAY

E. B. Whitaker of FSA, Says South Is Land of Opportunity

The Southern people are a strong wealth producing people but are a weak wealth retaining people," Charles A. Sheffield, southern field agent of the agricultural extension service, Washington, D. C. told the 1,600 visitors to the annual adult visiting day at the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station near Hope Friday.

"We have shamefully mined our fertility for cash crops—cotton, tobacco, peanuts, and allowed our soils to wash down the hillsides, or by constant cropping depleted our soils of their fertility—we have not cooperated with mother nature, nor have we even been kind to her," Mr. Sheffield declared.

"But despite the economic handicaps faced by the south," the field agent continued, "its people, of which you men and women present are representative, have the courage and stamina to cooperate among yourselves in an effort to acquire better standards of living than families of the past generations. That is clearly demonstrated by your presence here today to study and appraise the new findings of the experiments being conducted so that you may progress with your work on the farms and in the homes you represent."

In conclusion, Mr. Sheffield stated that the solution of farm problems through scientific research is now recognized as the most important signal approach to the development of a stabilized and successful agriculture.

Land of Opportunity E. B. Whitaker, Little Rock, assistant regional director, Farm Security Administration, told the visitors that although the South is the nation's economic problem number one, it is also the nation's land of opportunity.

"Instead of wasting time complaining over the situation, we should list our assets and advantages and sell the South to the southern people," he declared.

"I do not mean by this that we should close our eyes to our difficulties," he added. On the contrary we should dig out all the information concerning our needs and based on this information, figure out a remedy."

In alluding to the function of the experiment stations in this regard, Mr. Whitaker said that the 20,000 FSA families in Arkansas were following findings of a five main and four branch experiment stations as interpreted by the Extension Service, and were proving that the recommended practices were correct.

Following the morning demonstration tours, Mrs. R. C. Harville, Mabelvale, vice president of the state council of home demonstration clubs discussed the home demonstration program and what it has meant to farm women.

"By learning better home management and a more efficient way of performing our tasks through the extension program, we have found time for other things—literature, music, art, family and community nights, and country choruses," Mrs. Harville said.

The council officer then related the progress of the community landscaping and beautification program, pointing out that although the program was begun only nine years ago, there are now 265 communities in 70 counties participating.

Following Mrs. Harville's talk, Frederick J. Shulley, extension forester, spoke briefly on management of the timber crop.

Inspection of Farm The program began at 9 a. m. with inspection tours of the farm during which College of Agriculture specialists explained the results of demonstration in pastures, soil conservation, bee culture, timber land management, peach, growing, vegetable production and cotton, corn and legume varieties.

Members of the College of Agriculture assisting with the tours and demonstrations included J. F. Rains, district extension agent; Charles F. Simmons, extension agronomist; Dale McGregg, assistant extension agronomist; Frederick J. Shulley, extension forester; Earl J. Allen, extension horticulturist; Miss Ella Posey, district extension agent; Miss Sylvia Bates, extension specialist in home industries; and W. C. Wilbanks, L. C. Carter, C. J. Byrd, F. E. Delzell, D. S. McGregg, C. R. Pinckney, and R. S. Woodward of the agricultural experiment staff.

Entertainment features of the day's program included a music and stunt contest, and a short rodeo by the members of the Hope Fire Department.

ONE YEAR TO GO Presidential Possibilities

No. 5—Arthur H. Vandenberg

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Washington Correspondent

Three months ago Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan was hardly so much as mentioned as a presidential possibility. Today he is one of the top contenders for the Republican nomination.

This is partly because he is politically astute, and partly because he has made an excellent record in his job.

Few senators are more industrious. He seldom misses a Senate session or a committee hearing. Usually sits with crossed legs, one arm over the back of his chair, chewing gum—but paying close attention, always. He is good at the rough and tumble interchange of Senate debate. His colleagues like him.

Vandenberg was the first man to criticize the huge revolving fund which the social security act would have set up. It looked like bad business and is cutting the fund down. Vandenberg led the fight that beat the Florida ship-canal project. He is one of the most energetic economy advocates in the Senate.

A former Michigan newspaper publisher, he has been in the Senate since 1923. He is 55 and has been active in Republican politics since his youth.

He pulled the canniest political coup of the year by announcing that the next president ought to pledge himself to one term, since he will have to do many unpopular things which a man seeking re-election would loath to do. That announcement, plus a dawning realization that his Senate record is first-rate, has focused new attention on him as a possible nominee.

HIS ASSETS: Political shrewdness, along with considerable native ability; geographical availability; the probability that economy will be a popular issue in 1940; a consistent record in public office.

HIS LIABILITIES: A speaking voice which doesn't "radio" well; the fact that he has committed himself on many roll-calls; his solid conservatism (which, of course, will be an asset if the "swing to the right" continues).

HIS CHANGES: As of today, excellent.

Bailey Usurping Power, New Charge

Meanwhile, Governor Gets Higher Rating for State Bonds

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The Arkansas Democrat said Friday that "certain prominent Little Rock attorneys" whom it did not name had charged that Governor Bailey has "usurped legislative powers, and is exceeding his authority" in an executive order calling for the issuance of 140 million dollars in highway debt refunding bonds.

The paper said its was specifically charged that the governor had no authority to repeal the provisions of highway maintenance and pledge all the revenues to debt service.

Bond Rating Raised WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Gov. Carl E. Bailey of Arkansas announced Thursday night he had obtained top rating for all of the state's direct obligations, facilitating his plans to refund the state's $140,000,000 in highway bonds.

Bailey received letters from Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and C. B. Upham, deputy comptroller of the currency, raising the rating of the state's bonds from substantial to standard classification. The governor said the action had the approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

"Heretofore, substantial ratings of Arkansas bonds have precluded the purchase of the bonds by banks outside Arkansas," Mr. Bailey said.

"This new policy on the part of these agencies means an entirely new market is opened up for the sale of Arkansas bonds."

"The sum total of the significance of this new policy is that Arkansas' credit is firmly and finally reestablished as a credit of the respectability which should be accorded to a sovereign state."

"The establishment of this policy is the result of adherence to sound financial practice by the state and unremitting effort by Bank Commissioner Grover Jernigan."

Mr. Bailey, Mr. Jernigan, Harvey C. Couch of Pine Bluff, president of the Arkansas Power and Light Co., and Raymond Rebsamen, Little Rock business man, participated in conferences with the federal officials.

First-Hand Information

The 1940 relief bill calling for another big appropriation—$1,717,000,000 for all types of relief—is now before Congress and there's hardly a member who hasn't broadcast his solution of the relief problem, either on the floor or off.

Some have a really intelligent understanding of the question and others are just talking to fill the Congressional Record which they'll send the folks back home as evidence of their statesmanship.

But a report to Congress by the American Association of Social Workers raises the question whether it isn't about time that committee of congressmen turn case workers during the summer recess and get some first-hand information.

The document contains some alarming and unpleasant revelations about administration of relief in this country. Just listen to a few excerpts from it:

An Indianapolis couple and their nine children live in a house so infested with rats that the husband must stay awake nights to guard his family.

Relief allotments vary from $38.16 a month in New York to $2.91 in Mississippi.

Sixty-five different agencies administer relief in one unnamed county.

In 254 Texas counties the only assistance available is federal surplus commodities.

Food grants in one state are approximately one-fifth of a minimum standard food budget prescribed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The association contends that these findings emphasize the need of a new system of administering relief by federal grants to states.

Without entering that highly debatable question, it is hoped that the report awakens Congress to the realization that some change is necessary—and soon—to provide a more efficient and more equitable relief administration.

Aviators Seek to Prevent "Blackout" During High Altitude Maneuvers

When a pilot in an airplane indulges in certain maneuvers, he occasionally suddenly loses his vision, suffering what is called "blackout" or, scientifically, amourosis fugax. This is, of course, exceedingly serious, so much so that aviation experts have been studying the causes of such temporary blindness.

It is believed that gravity is responsible, the force of gravity being produced by a violent turn in the air roughly at right angles to the initial course of the plane while it is attaining the necessary speed.

British flyers endeavored to produce the condition by indulging in experiments, making loops or dips at speeds of 175 to 200 miles per hour, and in association with such loops and dips making a sudden turn.

The pilots describe their sensations under the circumstances as being "like a concertina." The skull feels as if it were a solid ball of great weight resting on the spine. The skin of the forehead, cheeks, and eyelids become numb.

As the gravity factor is produced by the turn, the vision is first blurred, then there is a blue haze, and after that a sudden sensation of intense blackness. At the same time there is a feeling of weakness in the limbs, amounting to inability to move the arms or legs.

The blackout may last one or two seconds, or often as much as 20 seconds. If it lasts any longer, the aviator may become unconscious. One flight lieutenant who was recording his experience determined that the blackout in his case lasted from 12 to 15 seconds, after which he suddenly became fully conscious.

In the violent dip and turn after three loops, the ground, which was 5000 feet below, was dim, giving a sensation that you get when reading small print too close to your eyes. It is believed that the entire set of symptoms results from having the blood drawn from the brain by centrifugal force.

Schemes have been worked out for preventing this condition. One is to bend the body sharply forward as the went a tight webbed elastic belt which would exert a back pressure. Experiments are also being made with inhaling carbon dioxide gas which would drive up the blood pressure. The studies indicate the great importance of realizing human limitations in relationship to modern machinery.

HIGHLIGHTS FROM LATEST BOOKS

Agassiz Wonders About Leisure

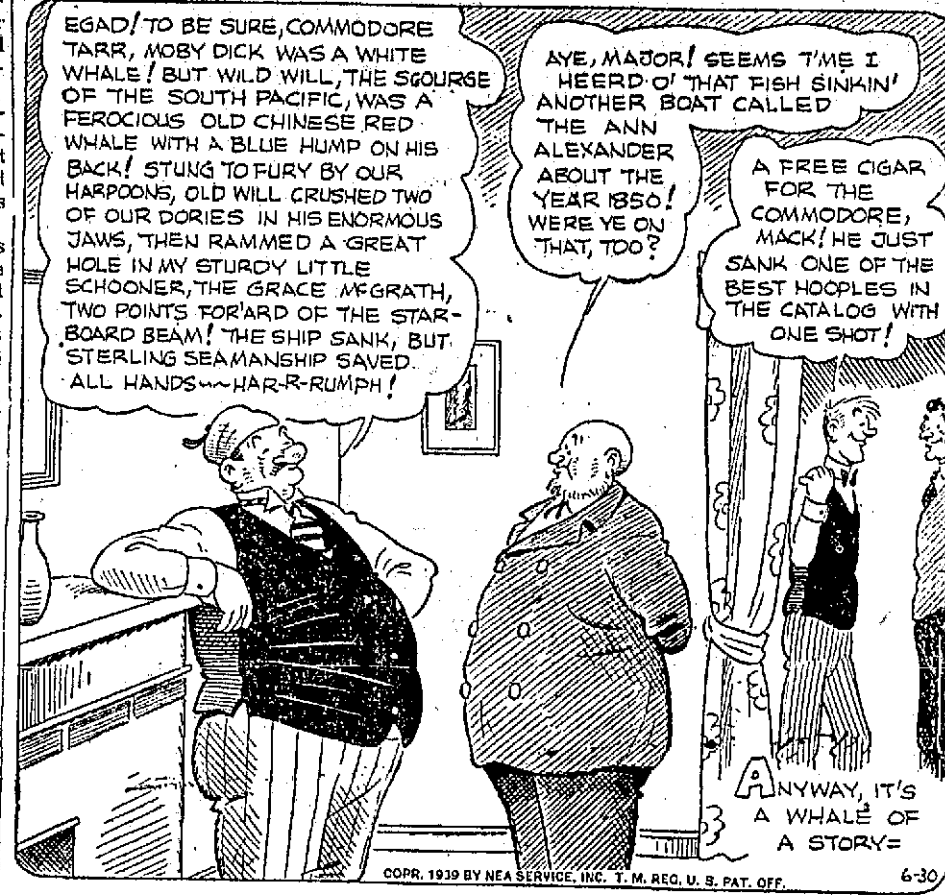

It is an exceedingly merry, humorous biography of the great 19th century scientist and naturalist, Louis Agassiz, that Mabel L. Robinson has written in "Rimmer of the Mountain Tops" (Random House; $3). Here was a man who made a tremendous dent in American life. One of his first impressions of America as he came here from Switzerland is quoted briefly below:

"The rapidity of motion is frightful to those who are unused to it," he says, "but you adapt yourself to a speed, and soon become, like all the rest of the world, impatient of the slightest delay. I well understand that a nantipathy for this mode of travel is possible. There is something infernal in the irresistible power of steam, carrying such heavy masses along with the swiftness of lightning. The habits growing out of continued contacts with railroads, and the influence they exert on a portion of the community, are far from agreeable until one is familiar with them."

"You would cry out in dismay 'You would cry out in dismay you see your baggage flung about pell like logs of wood, trunks, traveling bags, hatboxes, all in same mill, and if here and there a thing goes to pieces no one is astounded. Never mind! We go fast, we time—that is the essential thing.' It occurs to him, watching us pass him, to wonder what we do with the minutes we work so hard to gain. 'What is wanting in all these men is neither skill nor knowledge. In both, they seem to compete with us, and in order and actively they even surpass me of our savants. What they need is leisure.'"

Former President Smith Understood to Have Accomplices

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—Louisiana State University's million-dollar scandal soon may involve several persons as accomplices of the school's fugitive former president, Attorney General David Ellison hinted strongly Thursday.

"Every time we examine a witness new names are brought in for us to summon," Ellison said in announcing the special inquiry would recess over the July 4 holidays.

More light on the university enigma was promised as the school's Board of Supervisors met to go over records and board minutes which Gov. Earl K. Long said had been over more thoroughly "doctored" by Smith, as secretary, than was at first supposed.

Police were reported standing by with a warrant for at least one of Smith's former associates who had been questioned by the grand jury seeking to find out how Smith converted $500,000 of university funds, borrowed from three banks, into his own use for market speculation.

State officials have announced that in addition to this Smith had access to $1,200,000 of university bonds, of which he used $500,000 as market collateral with brokers. All these bonds, most of which were unauthorized, have been recovered.

Brokers' reports showed Smith dropped at least $430,000 in the market by betting the wrong way on wheat. The remainder of the $500,000 obtained in the last six weeks from the banks is as yet unaccounted for, but Smith is believed to have been nearly penniless when he left here.

WPA to Suspend

because the act and appropriation measure under which the WPA has operated through the fiscal year will expire Thursday midnight, stopping all work.

The work suspension, he added would be carried out even if congress passed the new relief bill by midnight, because several days would be needed to draft any new rules required by the measure.

"Due to the circumstances we are not in a position to say what the new bill will contain or what will be required of us," Sharp said. "We will stand prepared, however, to put into effect as speedily as possible such regulations as may be inaugurated."

The order, affecting the first complete suspension for the organization since its inception in July, 1935, applies to commitments for materials, truck hire, as well as projects, Sharp explained, since no funds are available for any purpose.

It justifies that reputation for wisdom. He made the great task of his and reign the building of the Tennessee Valley. David had been forbidden build because, in spite of his being as a shepherd boy with the sheep of poetry and music, he was real a man of blood. The prayer that David made at the dedication of the temple, as recorded in the Old Testament, tells of a glory even greater than the building itself—a discerning, not boastful, or glorying in greatness and beauty of the Temple, but mindful that the God of the Temple was a God of the whole universe, and that if the whole world did not contain him, much less the temple that Solomon built.

This speaks of a great and good Son. But there were other aspects of his man. He did not show wisdom either in the choice or multiplicity of his wives; and although the people were willing to suffer long as the glory of his reign and building projects was emphasized, the complaint and disruption immediately following upon Solomon's death was the extent to which the magnificence of his reign, and even the building of the Temple, had been based upon the heavy burden of taxation levied upon the people. The seed of dissolution were in the kingdom in this very time of its greatest splendor.

Life of Solomon gives occasion to set upon the strange intermingling of good and evil, in events and character, in human influence. Solomon was the son of Bathsheba, with whom David had committed adultery and for whom he had sent her hand into the thick of temptation. The might be killed. It was a part of the strange blending of good and evil that was to follow.

SERIAL STORY

PAR IS LOVE

BY EDWIN RUTT
Copyright, 1939
NEA REWRITE, INC.

Yesterday, Royalty built Ron and Wilfrid, brother, so Ron said $100 to teach Wilfrid the wrong lesson, if didn't say I wouldn't. They replied, standing deeper in the affair.

CHAPTER VIII

"WELL then," exclaimed Ron excitedly, "will you? Come on! Speak up!"

"Don't rush me," said Roy. "I'm thinking. Your argument appears reasonable. Your brother tries to put one over on you. You forestall him cleverly. I really think you should be rewarded for your perspicacity."

"Wh-ah?"

"Let it go," advised Roy. "I meant that I may do it."

The fried fillet of sole came out and seized his hand. "You will? Gee, that's great."

"I will, on one condition."

"Any condition you like," cried Ron joyfully.

"Well, that is that you take this match a little more seriously. You'll have to give me your word to spend more time practicing. And you must be in bed by 8 o'clock tonight. Those are my terms. If you don't like them, I withdraw."

"Brother," said Ron heartily, "don't worry. I'm going off to practice so fast you won't be able to see me for dust." He paused.

"Explain to Babs—Miss Ganning for me, will you? We were going over to town. But I see it's foolish. By the way, you might give me a few pointers on this game later. Good ones, I mean. But first, teach Wilfrid how not to play it, will you?"

"That," said Roy, "is the softest assignment I ever had. But see here, no tricks tonight. Sleep is important."

"If anybody sees me at 8:30," said Ron, almost gaily, "they'll think I'm Rip Van Winkle." And he departed with satisfying speed.

Roy waited till he was out of sight. Then he walked slowly toward the garage, well pleased with himself. Things were going nicely. Now if only...

He paused in his musing. Babs Ganning slipped out of the garage door. She smiled up at him.

Roy gazed at her and his heart went up and down like a pump handle. "Well, did I come through?"

"Like a true Herring. Now are you coming to town with me?"

"I wish," said Roy fervently, "somebody would try to stop me."

J. PEMBERTON GANNING sat

brooding over a fossil. In order to do this, he had slipped from the drawing-room after coffee, leaving his wife and daughter to entertain what he had come to look upon as perpetual guests, the twins, Ronald and Wilfrid Peyton. And, with the even four of them left, it seemed as if bridge or some lesser form of amusement would be in full swing presently. Not so, however. Shortly after J. Pemberton's withdrawal an amazing phenomenon occurred. Mr. Wilfrid Peyton, setting down his coffee cup and shifting from one foot to the other, begged to be excused. He had, he said, a slight headache. He thought, perhaps, that he would be better off in bed. Whereupon he slunk from the room, leveling a vindictive and exultant glance at his brother as he went.

Phenomenon number two took place several minutes after Wilfrid's departure.

"I'm sleepy," said Ron. Mrs. Ganning started.

"Good heavens," she exclaimed. "What is the matter with you boys tonight?"

"Nothing," said Ron. "Er—that is, nothing's the matter with me. I'm just sleepy, that's all."

Mrs. J. Pemberton Ganning was not the woman to brook shilly-shally and bubble-and-squeak.

"Well then," she said decisively, "you'd better go to bed, Ronald."

"Yes, ma'am," Ronald said respectfully. "I think I'd better."

He went out and Mrs. Ganning lifted an inquisitory eyebrow at her daughter.

"What on earth is the matter with them?" she demanded.

Barbara shrugged. "Search me. You don't suppose there was anything wrong with the food, do you?"

"Of course not. Those twins are dizzy, that's all."

"Their mother was a Rumford," said Mrs. Ganning thoughtfully.

"Of course, one never heard of the Peytons. But... where are you going, Barbara?"

"Oh, just out," said Babs vaguely, hesitating in the doorway.

MR. ROYALTON AUGUSTUS HERRING, lurking near the house like a derelict off an island, perceived a shadow in white coming down the steps. His heart, snared and enslaved though it was, achieved a fairly good bounce. The shadow approached.

"Babs," he breathed.

She appeared surprised. "Oh, I—I didn't know anyone was here."

"Liar," trembled on Roy's lips. He changed it for a four-letter word meaning something entirely different.

"Dear—er—that is, Barbara, are you alone?"

Double Feature Program to Be Shown at New Theater Saturday

Smith Ballou and Lou Gehrig, co-stars of "Rawhide," 20th Century-Fox release, coming Friday and Saturday to the New Theater, have one thing in common.

Ballou makes records while Gehrig breaks 'em.

The singing cowboy, who started his career as a singer and orchestra leader, has made more than five thousand phonographs, recording Lou Gehrig on the other hand, holds more baseball records than any other player in the history of the game—a list numbering more than 16.

The story of "Rawhide" is of the blazing action type, deftly interwoven with catchy music and colorful romance. In it Ballou and Gehrig team to wipe out the toughest band of cattle racketeers ever known to the West.

Feminine lead in the film is played by Evelyn Knapp with others in the cast including Arthur Loft and Si Jenks.

Gehrig appears by special arrangement with Christy Walsh.

The second feature on this two day program stars Hoot Gibson in "The Dude Bandit," a thrilling western of unusual merit. Hoot Gibson is a popular star of the saddle from his action of fast riding and hard hitting parts in only which he could stand the test. A group of eleven Hoot Gibson westerns will appear at the New Theater during the coming months.

An exclusive feature with the New Theater.

Chapter number three of The Hawk of the Wilderness with a fine cast of stars including Herman Brix, as well as the three stooges in "Yes We Have No Bananza" their latest and best comedy.

"Grand Jury Secrets" Is July 4th Feature Attraction at the Saenger

When "Grand Jury Secrets" new Paramount drama opens Tuesday at the Saenger Theatre, local moviegoers were treated to a picture that is outstanding for moments of tense, thrilling drama. With a story that combines action, thrills and romance in just the correct proportions, and a cast that has been well chosen, the picture shapes up as a drama of high calibre.

It doesn't take the story long to build up to a high dramatic pitch.

John Howard, cast as a crack reporter and short-wave radio enthusiast, has a hunch that the special Grand Jury called by his brother and assistant district attorney, Harvey Stephens, is conducting a very important investigation, one good for a "hot" story. He is well aware that his brother won't give him the story but he has no scruples about going after it in his own way, just as he has no scruples about showing interest in his brother's fiancée, played by Gail Patrick.

Steals Story By Short-Wave

Casting about for a method of stealing the story for his paper, Howard finds inspiration when a friend sends him a short-wave transmitter so compact that it fits into a brief case. With the aid of his photographer, William Frawley, he plants the transmitter in the Grand Jury room. Listening in on

Louis, Pastor May Be Matched Next

Galento and Nova Fight for Next September Is Also Talked

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Details virtually were completed Thursday for two September heavyweight bouts. The Associated Press learned that these two bouts, looking toward a meeting between the victors next spring, would be:

1. Champion Joe Louis in Detroit against Bob Pastor, the ex-New York University footballer who went 10 rounds aboard his bicycle with Louis two years ago.
2. Tony Galento against the only other outstanding challenger of the moment, Lou Nova of California, either in Philadelphia or New York.

Arrangements of these bouts, which would find the already talked-of rematch of the Louis-Galento thriller coming off probably next June if both get by, featured a day full of fistful developments, that included:

Louis Gets Bruse

1. Louis, his only mark from Tony's left-hand shot, a deep bluish bruise under the right eye, revealed that he went into the ring with the intention of letting the fight go about 10 rounds, and changed his mind when he was floored in the third.
2. Joe Jacobs, Galento's manager disclosed that Tony wasn't as serious about his training for Louis as he had made out. "Why," Jacobs said, "He was out almost every night till one or two o'clock, and he smoked cigars and drank beer the same as always."
3. Revelation of the fists of Galento and Max Schmeling (two years ago) that Louis' chin is vulnerable, caused just about every fight manager to hurl a challenge at the champion. Even Joe Gould spoke his piece on behalf of a return for Tommy Farr, who lasted 15 rounds with Louis. Promoter Mike Jacobs turned thumbs down on this one, since it involved holding the fight in London. Another challenge came from Melio Bettina, recognized in New York state as light heavyweight champion.
4. Promoter Jacobs announced that gross receipts from the crowd of 34,852, plus $50,000 from radio and motion picture rights, brought the total gross proceeds from Wednesday night's fight to $333,302.58, from which, after federal and state taxes were deducted, Louis collected $114,332.87, thus bringing his total ring earnings over the $1,500,000 mark. Galento's "cut" was $50,020.63.
5. Referee Arthur Donovan, who has been the third man in the ring in all Louis' fights here, decided he had never officiated at a "hotter" fight and said that until Tony went down in

We, the Women

By RUTH MILLETT

Any Job Is "Woman's Work," Prohibited She Can Do It

By RUTH MILLETT

Just because women aren't doing a lot of talking about their fights these days, no one need think that women aren't still pioneering in business and in the professions.

Calm pioneers they are, too. Their attitude is best expressed by "women's work is anything a woman can do as well as a man."

There is Mrs. Sarah Terpening, for example, who took over her husband's welding shop when he became a semi-invalid. Not content to be Chicago's only woman welder, Mrs. Terpening decided to teach the "man's trade" and turned her shop into a school—and her students into expert welders.

Another young woman, Rae Rambeau, of Los Angeles, recently learned welding when she found that the front door to the technical side of aviation was closed to women. She determined to go in by the back door, taking up acetylene welding (important in the building of airplanes) as the first step in a carefully laid ten-year plan.

And down in Starkville, Mississippi, there is a young M. D., a June graduate from the University of Tennessee Medical College, Audrie Leath Bobb, who is set on becoming a lieutenant in the U. S. Army Medical Reserve Corps.

Miss Bobb has taken the required physical examination and sent in her application. If she isn't taken, she's going to find out why. The would-be lady lieutenant says, "Women are just as capable as men. Why shouldn't they get in the army medical corps?"

Just a few

These are just a few of the women who are invading fields long marked "for men only."

Some others are: Mrs. Dorothy Bennett Hackscher, who is liquor salesman in New York City. Merry Hull, who turned to industrial designing. She recently won $1000 prize for her glove machine intended to turn out "three dimensional" gloves—something exciting new in the glove field.

And there's Peggy Coffin—Audrie's one and only female barkeep, backing away at the World's Fair in New York.

Paul Harrison in Hollywood

Studios Order Change of Character for Top-Notch Stars—Dead End Kids Turn Pius.

HOLLYWOOD.—There IS something new under the sun-arcs of the cinema. Current castings have given complete changes of character to many of the top-notch-players.

The actors themselves are happy about it. Myrna Loy dropped her aura of wholesome domesticity and dashed over to 20th-Fox to be Lady Eketh in "The Rains Came." It's such a wicked role that Lady Eketh finally has to be killed off. . . . At least temporarily. Anita Louise has got away from cloying sweetness by becoming a perfect you-know-what in "These Glamour Girls."

Basil Rathbone has checked his sneer while he impersonates Sherlock Holmes again, and in one sequence he actually becomes a song-and-dance man in a checkered suit. . . . Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland play part of "Babies in Arms" in blackface. And Tyrone Power wears brown makeup and a turban for his role of an East Indian doctor. In the first four reels of "Ninotchka," Greta Garbo will look even plainer than she does off-screen.

Bette Davis is ugly, however regal, as Queen Elizabeth, and Alice Faye is taking custard pies in the kisser as her introduction to slapstick comedy. . . . Virginia Grey, usually a snobbish clothes-horse, does even have a clean dress as she plays the daughter of a tugboat captain in "Thunder Afloat." Here's an actress, incidentally, who's finally destined to go places.

Usually an English lord or rich Britisher, C. Aubrey Smith becomes a very poor man in "The Underpup." And Virginia Weilder, Hollywood's top brat, turns out to be shy, sweet and quiet in the same picture. . . . Irene Dunne is waiting tables these days, and tough-tongued John Garfield has gone bucolic to the extreme of milking a cow. Priscilla Lane is just a sweet little country gal.

Sandra Henville, only 18 months old already is embroiled in a sex problem. Cast as a baby boy in "East Side of Heaven," she stole the picture and now is obliged to continue the male impersonation in "Sandy Takes a Bow." The studio is squirming with embarrassment and trying to think of a third story which might gracefully restore its surprise star to her true gender.

There are extensive plans for the rehabilitation of the Dead End Kids, who will do a right-about-face in a military school picture. In "Angels Wash Their Faces," they righteously help to scrub up city politics. And two of them, Bobby Jordan and Billy Halop, already have sympathetic roles in "Dust Be My Destiny."

Jane Withers Growing Up

Jane Withers, who got her first screen kiss in "Boy Friend," is practically an ingenue in "Chicken Wagon Family." You have seen the last of the chubby tomboy who, though held in class B pictures, maintained a place as one of the 10 leading box office

New Drummond Film Tops in Romance, Thrills, Opens at Rialto on July 4th

The legion of fans who have found that the "Bulldog Drummond" films offer the utmost in screen action and thrills plus an admixture of romance were not disappointed when the latest of the series, "Bulldog Drummond's Bride," opens Tuesday at the Rialto Theatre. Fast-paced, tightly knit, the plot of the H. C. (Sapper) McNeill thriller hinges on a daring bank robbery, and provides the featured players, John Howard and Heather Angel, with a climactic scene to which "Drummond" fans have been looking forward for some time.

The fast-moving story gets under way with "Drummond" (John Howard), set to marry his fiancée of long standing, "Phyllis" (Heather Angel), in a honeymoon cottage in France within a few days. Meanwhile, a notorious crook is busy planting a time bomb in the vault of a London bank. He is successful in blasting open the vault, and escapes with 10,000 pounds! He makes his escape to a flat in the vicinity, assumes the role of a house painter, and secretes the money in a small portable radio which he finds in the room.

Thief Escapes

Coincidentally, the flat happens to be the one which "Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Drummond" intend to occupy on their return from France. "Phyllis" arrives on the scene and is confronted with a painter seemingly gone mad. The police have drawn a cordon around the section in which the robbery was committed, but the robber-painter is successful with his act. The police take him away in an ambulance to put under observation! "Drummond" had only resisted joining in the chase because "Phyllis" has threatened to marry a mysterious "Mr. Aldergate," but when he confronts the frightened "Phyllis," he forms his own conclusions about the boldly conceived robbery.

"Phyllis" departs for France, but she has forgotten the radio. "Drummond" ships it to her, and when he learns that the money was cached in the radio, he follows her to France immediately. Meanwhile, the crook has escaped, discovered the location of the radio, and proceeded to France.

Thrill-Filled Climax

Drummond's efforts to capture the thief land him in a French jail, but when the gallant French Mayor and Chief of Police grasps the truth of the situation he determines to marry "Drummond" and "Phyllis." Here occurs the most thrill-filled climax of any "Drummond" picture, with "Drummond" in hot pursuit of the robber, and the Mayor and party pursuing "Drummond" in an effort to conduct the marriage. Of course, they are married, but only after moments of tense suspense that will set any moviegoer's pulses tingling.

John Howard and Heather Angel are supported by H. B. Warner, Reginald Denny, E. E. Clive, Elizabeth Patterson and Eduardo Ciannelli. All except the latter have been in many "Drummond" films and are well at home in their roles. James Hogan directed for Paramount.
